

Demolition of Existing Building 907, Folkestone School for Girls

Design & Access Statement

RDA
ARCHITECTS

THE APPLICATION SITE

It started in 1905 as the Folkestone County School for Girls. It is an average-sized, selective secondary school converted to academy status in February 2012, when its predecessor school, also known as the Folkestone School for Girls.

The school has specialism in mathematics and computing and is a training school.

The current application wishes to demolish the Building 907 which is part of the drama facility for the school relocated.

A report has been attached to the application which outlines the fact that the building requires updating. RDA obtained Planning and Listed Building Consent for the recladding of the building and replacement PVCu windows, however costs for this work coupled with the repairs make it un-viable.

AMOUNT

The proposal is to remove all the current timber frame building in its entirety leaving the area as an open space.

LAYOUT

The area is to be left as open space with the hardstanding that the building sits on made good.

LANDSCAPING

Soft landscaping – There are no landscaping proposals with this scheme.

APPEARANCE

N/A

Access

N/A