With reference to the above, this has changed since it was first designed and accepted and in many cases liked by the people of Shepway, especially Folkestone, however, it has changed beyond belief.

The buildings are now so high, this will not compliment the harbour but detract from it, that's if you can even see it.

I personally have always disliked the Burstin, these are even worse than the Burstin.

Where are the extra doctors going to be sited? The preschools, or are these not needed as most of them will be marketed as second homes for Londoners?

I am against this in its current format.
